Art meets Science - Science Meets Art

Professor Roy Burdon
University of Strathclyde

There is little doubt that a very interactive 'interface' now exists between the cultures of Art and Science. Basically, the challenges for both scientists, and the artists, to confront and interpret the world, and thereby change it for the better, are now greater than ever.

This talk will explore how Scientists and artists can each be viewed as explorers and how throughout history diverse artists, architects, engineers and scientists have shared interests and insights. The key questions that will be answered are: How science informed art? How art has informed science?

Suitability: S5/6 students
